Nel volume sono esposti e messi a confronto i principali risultati di una ricerca PRIN condotta per conto del Ministero dell'Istruzione dell'Università e della Ricerca, nelle Università di Roma, Napoli e Palermo. Le indagini si sono proposte di esplorare, entro differenti ambiti geografici e in situazioni spaziali, economiche e sociali differenti, il significato di una nuova entità insediativa: la città in estensione. Si tratta di una congettura sulla forma della città e sulla sua sostanza, a partire dalla quale si configurano pazientemente modelli di indagine e sondaggi progettuali unificati da una premonizione comune: la materia urbana "poteva avere un'altra forma, ma soprattutto essa era o poteva essere un'altra cosa". Il libro compendia criticamente quanto esposto più in dettaglio nelle sei pubblicazioni delle Unità di Ricerca. Ma si arricchisce anche dell'apporto critico di qualificati studiosi esterni, ai quali si devono i preziosi contributi che completano, con argomentazioni calzanti, la materia trattata.

This book presents and compares the principal results of a PRIN research project conducted on behalf of the Ministry of Education, Universities and Research, by the Universities of Rome, Naples and Palermo. Working within diverse geographic environments and different spatial, economic and social situations, the investigations explored the meaning of a new entity of settlement: the extended city. This conjecture on the form of the city and its substance served as a setting out point for the patient configuration of research models and design investigations united by a common premonition: the city "could have assumed another form, but above all that it was or could have been something else". The book presents a critical summary of the more detailed publications produced by the Research Units. At the same time, it is also enriched by critical contributions authored by external scholars, whose pressing arguments complete the subjects explored.
